

the janet jackson incident is nothing the fcc should waste it's time on. seeing a tiny part of a breast for a split second will not harm anyone. the fcc should worry more about the lies and deceptions in advertising, especially infomercials.